James F. Nagle

James F. Nagle has written six books on federal contracting: Federal Procurement Regulations: Policy, Practice and Procedures, (American Bar Association Press [ABA], 1987); How to Review a Federal Contract and Research Federal Contract Law, Second Edition, (ABA Press, 2000); Federal Construction Contracting, (Wiley Law Publications, 1992); History of Government Contracting, Second Edition, (George Washington University Press, 2000); he has co-authored the standard text for law school government contract law courses, Whelan and Nagle, Cases and Materials on Federal Government Contracts and Nash, Cibinic, Nagle, Administration of Government Contracts, 4th Edition, 2006. In construction law, he has co-authored and edited Washington Building Contracts and Construction Law, Butterworth (now Aspen) Publishers, 1994 and is a contributing author to nine other books. His more than 75 articles—on subjects as diverse as protests, changes, terminations, claims, and the Federal Acquisition Regulation—have appeared in such publications as the Public Contract Law Journal, Military Law Review, NCMA Journal, and Contract Management.

The former chief of the Logistics and Contract Law Branch of the Department of the Army Staff and trial team chief in the Army's Contract Appeals Division, Mr. Nagle has extensive experience in supply and services, international, major system, and construction contracts. Besides representing contractors, he has mediated disputes between both the government and the prime and the prime and its subcontractors. Other lawyers often consult Mr. Nagle on government contracts, and the Justice Department, as well as contractors, have used him as an expert witness to explain federal contracting.

Mr. Nagle has taught all aspects of government contracts, construction law, and contract management for the Graduate Program on Contract Management of the Florida Institute of Technology, The George Washington University's School of Business and Public Management, The George Washington University's National Law Center, the University of Washington, Seattle University's School of Law and other professional organizations. He has lectured in 23 states, the District of Columbia, and four foreign countries.

Actively involved in professional organizations, Mr. Nagle is a past president of the Board of Contract Appeals Bar Association (and has received its Life Services Award) and has served on the board of editors of the NCMA Journal, as the book review editor for both the Public Contract Law Journal and The Construction Lawyer, and as the director of publications for numerous organizations. Mr. Nagle has long been involved with the ethical compliance aspects of government contracting. This stemmed from his work while still with the government culminating in his service as the Ethics Advisor to the Office of the Chief of Staff of the United States Army. In private practice he has drafted code of business ethics for contractors, conducted in-house seminars to educate contractor personnel on the intricacies and pitfalls of government contracting, and conducted internal investigations to insure compliance with government contract requirements, including specifically compliance with the Truth in Negotiations Act and False Claims Act. He received the Federal Bar Foundation Award for Distinguished Accomplishment in the Study of Procurement Law.

Mr. Nagle received a B. S. from Georgetown University School of Foreign Service, a J. D. from Rutgers University, and both an LL.M. and an S. J. D. in government contracts from The George Washington University National Law Center. He is one of only an estimated three people who have earned the latter distinction.
